Business Insights and Recommendations

Key Insights

1. Strong repeat purchasing: 87.6% of customers (1,272 out of 1,452) placed more than one order, indicating strong repeat-purchasing behaviour.
2. Higher value from repeat customers: Repeat customers generated approximately $425 in average revenue per customer, compared with $112 for one-time customers.
3. Thai cuisine leads performance: Thai cuisine generated the highest revenue ($127,429) and the highest repeat-customer rate (31.5%), while Chinese cuisine recorded the lowest revenue ($59,562) and repeat-customer rate (18.2%).
4. High-value customers: A small group of customers generated the highest individual revenue, presenting an opportunity to understand their purchasing patterns and encourage continued engagement.
5. Top menu items: The five highest-revenue menu items generated between $3,267 and $3,514 each, making them candidates for further investigation and targeted promotion.

Recommendations

1. Encourage second purchases: Target the 180 one-time customers with follow-up offers or incentives and monitor how many return.
2. Strengthen customer retention: Test loyalty rewards and personalised promotions to encourage repeat purchases and increase customer value.
3. Investigate cuisine performance: Study the factors behind Thai cuisine's strong performance and Chinese cuisine's weaker results before making pricing, menu or marketing changes.
4. Retain valuable customers: Analyse the preferences and ordering patterns of high-revenue customers to develop relevant offers and improve retention.
5. Evaluate menu profitability: Examine the costs and profit margins of top-revenue menu items before prioritising them for promotions or bundles.

Conclusion

The analysis highlights repeat purchasing as an important area of business strength and opportunity. By improving customer retention, investigating cuisine performance and evaluating menu profitability, the business can make more informed decisions to support sustainable revenue growth.